Letter from the AAAP President, Dr. Rocio Crespo

Thank you for entrusting me with leading our organization this year. Thank you, Louise, for your hard work and dedication and for being an outstanding role model. This year, in addition to continuing the programs that Louise carried forward or initiated, I would like to start the review our mission and vision statements, and to develop measurable goals and objectives by which we can gauge the success of our organization.

This online training course is designed to educate general-practice veterinarians about poultry issues in small and backyard poultry flocks. The course was made possible through collaboration between the University of Kentucky, Utah State University, and Michigan State University. Funding was provided by a USDA-NIFA grant.

The course consists of a series of individual modules, which allow each participant to advance at their own pace. At the end of each module, there is a short quiz consisting of true/false and/or multiple-choice questions.

To receive CE credits, each participant must achieve 70% or higher on each quiz. Upon successful completion of all modules in this course, 8 RACE-approved continuing education credits will be granted.

The course was developed to address the needs of the growing population of people with interest in small and home poultry flocks. As with any animal production enterprise, health problems occur. Unfortunately, there are very few avian veterinarians available to help this group of producers. Most avian veterinarians are employed by large poultry production companies. This became a significant issue starting in January 2017 when new Veterinary Feed Directive regulations restricted the availability of common medications to small flock owners. Since 2017, any small or home flock owner wanting to purchase previously available over-the-counter medications now need a prescription from a licensed veterinarian. A valid veterinarian-client-patient relationship must exist for a veterinarian to provide a prescription. Most practicing veterinarians do not feel comfortable treating poultry due to a lack of experience. The purpose of this course is to provide knowledge on poultry health with the hope of educating more veterinarians interested in serving the small flock owners.

The History of Avian Medicine Website Has Been Updated

The website with information about the history of avian medicine can be accessed from the AAAP website by clicking on “About” and then on “History.”

Learn about the history of our wonderful Association in the section “History of AAAP” with five articles.

The section “Historical articles” contains twenty-nine historical articles published in Avian Diseases and other historical documents. These articles demonstrate how early researchers build the foundation of our current knowledge of avian diseases.

The “Biography project” provides lots of information about researchers in avian health and poultry veterinarians who have made important contributions to the poultry industry. Read about your mentor(s), researchers and poultry veterinarians. If your mentor has not submitted his or her autobiography let us know and we will ask for their autobiography. We also encourage retired or almost retired researchers and poultry veterinarians to submit their autobiography to Dr. Gabriel Senties-Cue at Gabriel.Senties-Cue@tvmidl.tamu.edu.

The section “Tributes” celebrates the early pioneers in avian health.

A new section “Obituaries” has been added to the website. If you want to submit an obituary for a colleague, please contact Cristina Lindsey at christina.parr@gmail.com, Yuko Sato at ysato@iastate.edu or Gabriel Senties-Cue. Please submit any interesting information you may have on the history of avian medicine to Ton Schat at kas24@cornell.edu.

Dr. Tirath Singh Sandhu, Ph.D, DVM, formerly of Speonk, NY, passed away peacefully at the age of 85 on Tuesday, August 30, 2022. Born and raised in India, he was the son of the late Bachan Kaur Sandhu and Fauja Singh Sandhu. Dr. Sandhu was a resident of Speonk for nearly 50 years, having moved from Gainesville, Florida where he received his Ph.D. from the University of Florida. Dr. Sandhu was a distinguished veterinarian and microbiologist specializing in the field of avian pathology. He served as the Director of the Cornell University Duck Research Laboratory and International Duck Research Cooperative in Eastport, NY for more than 33 years.

It is with great sadness that we heard that Dr. Richard (Dick) Julian a AAAP life member (1997) and professor emeritus at the University of Guelph, Canada, passed away peacefully on May 15 at the age of 92. Dick grew up on a farm before entering veterinary medicine and graduating from the University of Toronto, Ontario Veterinary College in 1952 with a DVM, VS. He married Jean in 1954 and was initially a practitioner in Kenora, then in Kemptville, Ontario where their three children, Kirby, Kathryn and Stephen were born. In 1961, he was appointed as a pathologist and then head of Veterinary Diagnostic Laboratory (1964) with the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food in Brighton, Ontario. They spent two years in the West Indies where Dick was working with the Pan-American Health Organization to organize the veterinary diagnostic laboratories network in the Caribbean islands.
